

The European Federation of Biotechnology is strongly in favour on ethical grounds of minimizing the use of animals for scientific purposes, but cannot support a total ban on their use until suitable alternatives have been developed and approved by Authorities. Our members are actively engaged in developing methods to replace animal studies wherever possible, but a limited number of animal studies remains essential, not least in critical aspects of medical and pharmaceutical research.

